INDEX

TO VOLUME THIRTY-EIGHT.

Aberdeen, Lord, 336, 337, 342.
America, 278–302.
Armansperg, 140, 141.
Austria, 336, 337, 344, 345.

Banks, Sir Joseph, investigations into the character of uredines, 373.
Baver, M., microscopical researches into the nature of uredines, 373.
Blackwood's Magazine, 90.
Bright, Mr, 245.
British intervention in foreign struggles, 490—interest in foreign struggles, 491–493—discord between the wishes and the acts of the nation, 493, 494—intervention in its modern sense, 495, 496—league of nations for the overthrow of French dominion, 497—foreign policy of England ranged on the side of national independence, 498—the non-intervention policy, 498—upheld by mere force of authority despite conviction, 499—our responsibility, 500, 501—where shall we obtain instruction how to do our duty as members of the family of mankind, 502—Christianity, the ultimate guide, 503, 504—Historicus, 503, n.—arguments urged against national interference on behalf of foreign freedom, 505—treaties of alliance with foreign states, 506—alliances recommended by Christian duty, 507, 508—alliances recommended by true policy, 509—cases where intervention would have been politic, 510–512—Christianity and policy at one, 513—non-interference proper in merely insurrectionary movements, 514—practical application of principles, 515—argument of Mr Mill, 516–518—principle to be fearlessly acted on, 518–520.

Calvinism, 221, 223, 227, 231, 232.
Capodistrias, Count John, governor of Greece in 1829, 138—conflicting estimates of his character, 138—ambitious aims, 139—barbarities in the conduct of the war, 139—his persecution of the family of Mavromichales, 139—assassination of Capodistrias, 139.
Cambridge, the Duke of, the Guards, 361.
Chambers' Domestic Annals of Scotland, 191—plan of the work, 193—religious plays, 194—holiday sports of the people, 194, 195—abolition of ancient holiday amusements, 196—witchcraft and witches, 196–202—food and raiment, 203, 204—dearths and pestilence, 205, 206—scarcity of beef, 206—the discoverer of logarithms, 207—state of medical science two hundred years back, 208—state of the roads in the sixteenth century, 209—introduction of carriages, 210—rise of the Post-office, 211—the growth of trade, 211—rise of the banking system, 212—religion and the church, 213—material development of the resources of the country during the last fifty years, 214.
China, 262–270.
Cloud, the evening, 85.
Colcotronis, M., 151.
Cobden, Mr, 245, 249.
Collins', Wilkie, novels, 183–185.
Colenso, Bishop—see Pentateuch, recent attacks on the.
Convicts and Transportation, 1—the convict class, 2—casual, and habitual criminals, 3—different opinions regarding the treatment of criminals, 4—deterring penalties, 5, 6—penal servitude as carried out in England, 7–9—failure of penal servitude to curtail crime, 9, 10—English and Irish systems contrasted, 11—Irish system of intermediate prisons, 12, 13—the prison of Smithfield, 14—treatment on liberation from intermediate prisons, 15—effects of English and Irish systems, 17—prison life to be reforming must be made unpleasant, 18—the dietary scale ought to be altered, 19—the lash as a punishment, 20—seclusion beneficial in reforming criminals, 20—liberation from prison ought to be conditional on proved fitness for liberation, 21—'ticket-of-leave men,' 21, 22—labour sentences in place of fixed terms ought to be introduced, 23, 24—incorrigible offenders ought to be incarcerated during life, 25—aid on liberation, 25—police supervision, 26–28—deterring agencies, 29—proposed revival of transportation, 30—want of colonies to absorb our convicts, 31–33—cost of criminals in the United Kingdom, 34, 35.
Coup d'état, 331.
Crimea, Kinglake's Invasion of the, 325—his opportunities of observation, 325—style and language, 326–328—alleged prejudices, 329—state of public feeling in France previous to the coup d'état, 331—the coup d'état, 331—Mr Kinglake on the officers of the English army, 332—objections to contemporary history, 333, 334—causes of the war, 334–338—the French alliance, 339—the 'Vienna

Note,' 339, 340—the French Emperor and Lord Palmerston, 341—Lord Palmerston's resignation and return to office, 342, 343—cessation of diplomatic relations between the Western powers and Russia, 343—Napoleon's autograph letter to the Czar, 344—summary of causes of the war, 345—sketch of Lord Palmerston, 346—the Cabinet deliberating on the invasion, 347—state of unpreparedness of the allies for war, 348—the despatch of the 29th June, 349, 350—want of information regarding the enemy, in the camp of the allies, 351—the conference between Lord Raglan and Sir George Brown, 351, 352—difficulties of Lord Raglan, 353—the misplaced buoy; the place of honour; the march, 354—the plan of attack, 355–358—assault on the Great Redoubt, 359–364—the telegraph heights, 364—victory, 364—results, real and speculative, 365.

Cunningham, Dr—see Historical Theology.

Danish literature, past and present, 303, 304—gradual development of the Danish language, 304, 305—richness of Danish ballad poetry, 305, 306—operating causes preventing the growth of Danish literature, 307, 308—various editions of ballad poetry, 307 n.—Holberg, 308—resuscitation of the Eddas and the Sagas, 309, 310—Evald's poems, 311—Baggesen and Oehlenschläger, 313—Schack Staffeldt, 315—Grundtvig-Ingemann, Heiberg, Winther, and Paludan-Müller, 316–320—Christian K. F. Molbech's poems, 321–323—conclusion, 324.

'Dante,' tragedy of, 322, 323.

Davidson, Dr—see Pentateuch, recent attacks on the.

Disraeli, Mr 241–244, 246–250, 252.

Dosios, Aristides, 148, 149.

Dundas, Vice-Admiral, 348.

Egypt, sojourn of the Israelites in, 63—discoveries confirm the Pentateuch, 67.

Eliot's, George, novels, 177–183.

Empires, the disintegration of, 257, 258—not of religions, 258, 259—nations and empires, 259–261—China, 262–270—Russia, 270–278—America, 278–302.

English and French governments, compact between, in 1853, 337.

Evald's poems, 311.

Extracts from Chambers' Domestic Annals, 197–208.

Faivre, Professor—see Gœthe.

Fairy's funeral, the, 100, 101.

Finlay, Mr, extracts from his History of Greece, 142, 143, 144.

Forbes, the Rev. Dr, on a supposed change having crept into the Hebrew codices, 65, note.

France, state of public feeling in, that paved the way for the coup d'état, 330.

'French alliance,' the, 339, 340.

French and English governments, compact between, in 1853, 337.

Gordon, Mrs—see Wilson, Professor.'

Gœthe, Professor Faivre's scientific biography of, 107—the scientific writings of Gœthe more highly appreciated in France than in England, 108—Faivre's method of treating Gœthe's works, 109—Gœthe's opinion of his countrymen regarding his scientific attainments, 110—he studies the physical sciences, 110—his interview with Lavater and Zimmermann, 110—Gœthe invited to Weimar by the Grand Duke, he devotes his time to the study of botany and geology, 111—his studies under Professor Lodes, 112—his tour in Italy, 112—his studies and speculations at Naples, 113—his work at Jena and Weimar, 113—cold reception of Gœthe's essay on the metamorphosis of plants, 114—experiments in optics, 114—meeting of Schiller and Gœthe, 115—variety of Gœthe's labours, 116—cold reception of Gœthe's theory of colours, 117—publication of his scientific researches, 118—works on mineralogy, geology, palæontology, and meterology, 119—views of naturalists on the metamorphosis of plants, 120–122—the emission of light from plants, 122—anatomical discoveries, 124—the cranial vertebræ, 125—unity of organic composition, 125—history of Gœthe's errors in optics, 127–130—attack on Newton and his followers, by Schaupenhauer, 131—Gœthe's optical theory applied to art, 132—merits of Professor Faivre's work, 133.

Greece during the last Thirty Years, 134—impending doom of Islamism, 135—absorption of the Turkish dominions by the European powers, 136—the Greek and Sclave races, 137—a Byzantine empire, 137—results of the siege of Missolonghi, 138—the governor of Greece in 1829, 139—King Otho, 139—the regency, 140—their incapacity for government, 140–142—the revolution of 1843, 143—court duplicity, 145, 146—financial position of Greece, 147—the commission of 1859, 147, 148—conspiracy of 1861—attempt on the life of the queen, 148—conspiracy against the life of the king, 149—reforms attempted—the revolt of Nauplia, 150—scene in the legislative assembly, 151—abdication of the king, 152—stationary state of the country, 153, 154—national character of the Greeks, 155, 156—the prospects of Greece, 157—is Greece fit for constitutional government? 158, 159—the representative men of Greece, 160—commercial character of the Greeks, 162—agricultural prospects, 163—crown lands, 163—farmers and cultivators, 163, 164—physical peculiarities, 164—general backwardness in the system of cultivation—and manufactures, 165—Greece in a state of transition, 166, 167.

Grivas, Lieutenant, 150.
Grundtvig, 317.

Heiberg, Johan Ludvig, 318.
Heideck, General, 140, 141.
Henslow, Professor, on the blights of wheat, 376.
Historical Theology, 215, 216—Dr Cunningham as a logician, 217–220—his Calvinistic views, 221, 222—systems of the seventeenth century, 223, 224—progress in theology, 225, 226—the insoluble difficulty, 227, 228—the Socinian controversy, 228–231—the Arminian controversy, 231, 232.
Historicus, 503, n.
Holberg, 308, 309.

India, hill tribes of, 392—North Cachar tribes, 393, 394—travelling in North Cachar, 395—physical aspects of the country, 395, 396—variety of races of men, 396—variety of dialects, 397, 398—variety of manners and customs, 399, 400—the tribes in a state of active feud, 401, 402—dress of the hill tribes, 402—the Kookies, 403, 404—marriage customs, 405, 406—infanticide, 408—abnormal forms of marriage, 408, 409—domestic and political arrangements, 410, 411—slavery, 412—creeds and burial ceremonies, 413–415—composition of the population, 416–418—difference of burial customs, 419, 420—conclusion, 421, 422.
Ingemann, 317.
Israelites, 48, 61.

Judah, the family of, 55.

King, Christian, 311.
King Frode's feast, 315.
Kinglake—see Crimea.
Knight, the Wounded, 319, 320.

Lady Audley's Secret, 188.
Langebek, 310.
Little Gunver, 312.
Lyons, Lord, 353.

Martins, M. Charles, 108.
Maurer, M., 140.
Mavromichales, persecution of the family of, 139.
Metamorphosis of plants, theories entertained regarding the, by naturalists, 120–122.
Miaoulis, President of the legislative assembly of Greece, 150, 151.
Mill, Mr Stuart, on non-intervention, 516, 517.
Miller, Hugh, reference to the mildew in corn, 375.
Modern preaching, 423—indictment of the modern pulpit, 424–426—indiscriminateness of the charge of feeble preaching, 427—mediocrity in the pulpit, 428—past and present preaching, 429, 430—Bishop of London's charge, 431—causes operating on a paucity of candidates for the ministry, 432—theological literature, 433—the London pulpit, 434—Mr Spurgeon, 435—the art of preaching not cultivated, 436–438—real ground for complaint, 439, 440—the pulpit and the literary class, 440–442—doctrinal preaching, 442–444—the pulpit would gain in vitality and power by becoming more biblical, 445—preaching ought to be more Christian, 446—the ethical element, 447—preaching ought to be more human, 448—separation of the people from the church, 449—remedy for this state of things, 449, 450—effective delivery of sermons, 451–453.
Molbech's, Christian K. F., poems, 321.
Morea, the, 165.
Moses, 42.
Mucedines, 380, et seq.
Mystery of Reminiscence, the, 321, 322.

Nauplia, revolt of, 150.
Nesselrode, Count, 340.
Newcastle, the Duke of, 345, 349.
Newtonian theory respecting colour, attacked by Goethe, 127–131.
Novels and Novelists of the day, 168—popularity of the novel, 169, 170—capabilities of prose and poetry, 171, 172—manifold interest of the novel, 173, 174—Dickens and Thackeray, 175, 176—Kingsley—the Brontë Sisters, 177—George Eliot, 177–183—Wilkie Collins, 183–185—Mr Trollope, 185–188—Lady Audley's secret, 188—Thalatta, 189, 190.

Oehlenschläger, 313, 314.
Old Testament reference to mildew, 374.
Otho, king of Greece, 139, 142, 144, 149, 150, 152, 154, 159, 160.

Palmerston, Lord, 236, 238, 341, 343, 346, 491, 500.
Paludan-Müller, 319.
Passover, difficulties of the, 59.
Penny, Miss M., 79, 80.
Pentateuch, Recent attacks on the, 36—works of Dr Davidson and Bishop Colenso, their ecclesiastical position, 37, 38—honest difficulties of Bishop Colenso, 39—his position as a theologian, 40, 41—Dr Davidson's Introduction to the Pentateuch, 41—his sneering depreciation of evangelical writers on the Pentateuch, 42–44—mere authorities will not settle the Pentateuch controversy, 45—Dr Davidson ignores the miraculous element in the Pentateuch, 46, 47—Christ and His apostles identify themselves with the Pentateuch, 49, 50—serious character and real nature of the Pentateuch contest, 51—Dr Davidson and the double authorship of the Pentateuch, 52—authorship of the Pentateuch and credibility of its accounts distinct questions, 53—the subject beset with difficulties owing to the remoteness of the period to which the accounts refer, 53—brevity of the earlier biblical narratives, 54—Dr Colenso and the biblical account of the family of Judah, 55, 56—peculiarities in reckoning genealogies, 56, 57—Dr Colenso's unfair mode in dealing with scripture narrative, 58—summary of Dr Colenso's calculations and the institution of the passover, 59, 60—support of the Israelites and their flocks in Sinai, 61—mode of constructing scripture genealogies, 62, 63, and note—duration of the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt, 63 and note—their numbers at the exodus, 63, 64—number of the first-born, 65—Dr Forbes' mode of computing the first-born, 65, note—impracticability of exhibiting an account of the transactions which occurred in the early history of Israel, 65, 66—recent Egyptian and Assyrian discoveries bear striking testimony to the truth of the Scriptures, 67, 68—the Pentateuch testifies to the holiness of God and the depravity of man, 68–70—Dr Stanley's Lectures on the History of the Jewish Church, 69, note—question of authorship of the Pentateuch, 71–74.

Political Parties, prospects of the, 234—their confused state, 235, 236—'measures not men,' 237, 238—our foreign policy, 239, 240—Mr Disraeli, 241–244—Mr Bright, 245—the Manchester school, 246–249—the conservatives, 249—the coming session, 252–254—the liberal party, 254–256.

Raglan, Lord, 348, 349, 352–358.

Russell, Earl, on the recognition of the Confederate States, 500, n.

Russia, 270, 278, 335, 341, 343, 344.

Saisset, M., and Spinoza, 454—vidimus of M. Saisset's labours, 455–457—various estimates of Spinoza's writings, 457—Spinoza's mode of living, 458—at the Hague, 459—publication of 'Tractatus Theologico-Politicus,' 460, 461, n.—his ideal of religious life, 461—the meaning of the word Deus, 462–464—the Spinozistic problem the highest in metaphysics, 465, 466—verbal and unpractical consubstantialism, 467—Bishop Fitzgerald's lectures, 467, 468, n.—consubstantialism becoming atheism, 469—human personality lost on the other alternative, 471—is experience a criterion of metaphysical truth, 473—Rene Des Cartes, 474—Malebranche, 474—Spinoza as a biblical critic and a systematic theologian, 476–478—Newton and Clarke, 479—Germany and Leibnitz, 481, 482—Leibnitz and Eclecticism, 483—Kant, 484—three great types of philosophical teaching, 485, 486—alleged tendency to scepticism, 487, 488—intellectual freedom and religious faith, 489.

Scotland, dreadful effects of mildew in corn, in, 374, 375.

Sinope, the disaster of, 342.

Simos, M., 151.

Smithfield, Dublin, intermediate prison, treatment of prisoners in, 14.

Spinoza—see Saisset.

St Arnaud, Marshal, 353, 356, 357.

Thalatta, 189, 190.

Transportation—see Convicts.

Trinity, doctrine of the, 228–231.

Trollope's, Mr, novels, 185–188.

Vegetable epidemics, 366—province of the fungi, 367—analogy between animal and vegetable life, 367, 368—inquiry as to the origin of vegetable epidemics, 369—division of vegetable blights into groups, 370—the Hypodermii group, 370, 371—the uredines, 372–374—mildew, 374—rust, 375—Professor Henslow on rust and mildew, 376—smut, 377—bunted wheat, 378—ergot, 379—the potato disease, 380—the genus Botrytis, 384, 385—the fungus Oidium Tuckeri, 386–388—mode of dispersion of fungi, 388, 389—how are these destructive agencies to be checked? 390—lessons suggested by vegetable epidemics, 391.

'Vienna Note,' the, 339, 340.

Wilson's, Professor, Life, by Mrs Gordon, 75, 76—birth and parentage, 77—his school days, 78—enters Glasgow college in 1797, 78—he becomes a gentleman-commoner of Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1803, 79—college life, 79—courtship of Miss M., 79, 80—his departure from Oxford, and takes up his residence at Windermere, 80—boating and cock-fighting, 81, 82—character of Wilson's poetry, 83—extracts from his poems, 84, 85—his marriage with Miss Penny, 86—loss of his property through his uncle, 86—Wilson settles in Edinburgh in 1815, and is called to the bar, 86, 87—the Ettrick Shepherd, 87—his excursion to the Western Highlands, 87, 88—his prose writings, 89—starting of 'Blackwood,' 90—its literary 'staff,' 91—the moral philosophy chair, 92–100—the fairy's funeral, 100, 101—Wilson's contemporaries, 101–103—death of Mrs Wilson, 105—interview between Gibson Lockhart and Wilson, 105—Wilson pensioned by the Crown, 106—his last moments, 106.

MURRAY AND GIBB, PRINTERS, EDINBURGH.